Wins Against Personalities

Mr. Wilson successfully resisted an effort to amend his motion. The amendment would have pledged the association to oppose for re-election, or election to any other office, every member of the legislature who voted for the sales tax.

He urged against the injection of "personalities in this issue," and added, as a practical warning, that "after all, as a majority of the legislature voted for the measure, and it might defeat our purpose, which is repeal of the sales tax at once, to antagonize the members in this manner. Some of them have repented of their sins, and should be given a chance to correct them."

Executive Committee

The executive committee is composed of one member from each congressional district, as follows:

First, A. B. Lewis, Helena.

Second, T. L. McCaleb, McRae.

Third, J. H. Kirkpatrick, Rogers.

Fourth, E. E. Collins, Mena.

Fifth, John G. Bolton, Little Rock.

Sixth, Harley C. Stump, Stuttgart.

Seventh, M. P. Palmer, Camden.

These members were nominated by a committee appointed by J. M. Brooks of Blytheville, who served as chairman of the meeting. The nominating committee was composed of George H. Adams, Pine Bluff; Joe M. Walker, Helena; Lucien Coleman, LeFlore; Mark Brown, Rogers; S. M. McMillen, and E. E. Collins, Mena.

Results of Legislative Poll

At the outset of the meeting, Mr. Brooks commented Governor Futrell for his "entirely reasonable" proposal to call a special session if the opponents of the tax would obtain a pledge from a majority of the legislature to vote for repeal.

He said he had received positive

CCC Company of White Recruits Entrains for Hope

Company 3738, of 190
Men, Leaving Ft. Leavenworth
This Week-End

TO ARRIVE TUESDAY

Capt. Manie H. Meyer Is in Command of Alton
Camp Company

Company 3738, Missouri unit of the Civilian Conservation Corps now stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., will entrain Sunday for Camp Alton, six miles south of Hope, it was learned here Friday.

Although not officially announced, it was understood that the Missouri unit is composed of white recruits. The company has an enrolled strength of 190 men and three officers.

Captain Manie H. Meyer is commanding officer of the unit. The company is due to arrive in Hope next Tuesday.

A telegram received here Friday by Frank Stanley, county agent, from Fred C. Newport of Conway, regional director of the Soil Conservation Service, said:

"A wire from Major Baer of Little Rock says that company from Missouri leaves Leavenworth July 21 for SCS thirteen at Hope." Mr. Stanley expressed belief that the company would be white recruits.

In the meantime an additional crew of carpenters and laborers went to work Friday to rush completion of buildings at the camp, located just off the Lewisville highway six miles south of Hope.

Meeting Friday for Country Club

Coach Hammons Asks
Good Attendance Here
at 8 Friday Night

Coach Foy Hammons urged all persons interested in the proposed country club at Bridgeway's lake to be present at 8 p. m. Friday at a meeting at Hope Furniture company store.

Tentative construction plans and by-laws will be outlined.

Goodrich in Plea of Guilty and Gets Life

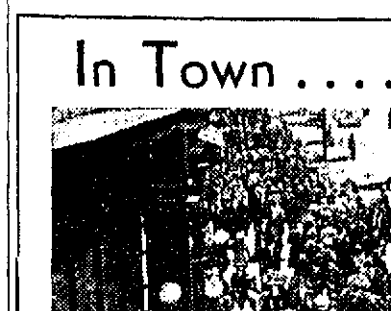

DETROIT, Mich.—(AP)—Morton Ward Goodrich brought his trial for the murder of Lillian Gallagher, 11, to an abrupt end Friday by pleading guilty.

Fate and trembling, the one-time trap-drummer in a beer garden orchestra stood before Recorder's Judge Henry S. Sweeney as sentence to life imprisonment at hard labor in the Marquette branch prison was imposed.

Farmland Up $10 Acre Since 1932

Average Price Gains 20
Per Cent, Federal Land
Bank Declares

ST. LOUIS.—(AP)—Based on its own sales experience, the Federal Land bank reported Thursday that the market value of farm lands in Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas has increased an average 20 per cent, or $10 an acre, since 1932.

Good farms in these states, the bank said, are bringing from $125 to $175 an acre, $25 to $30 an acre more than they did three years ago. Medium to good lands are up about 310 an acre from 1932 and sell from $30 to $60 an acre. Low grade farms have shown little increase and are on the market at from $10 to $25 an acre.

Since January 1, the bank has sold 212 farms for an aggregate of $772,090. These sales adequately reflect general farm conditions throughout the district, the bank said.

Re-Enlists in Army

William (Bill) Hutchens, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Hutchens, Sr., re-enlisted in the United States Army, and left Hope Wednesday for Fort Riley, Kan., where he will be stationed. Hutchens served three years in the Army, at Fort Sill, Okla.

Old-Age Pension System Outlined by Flora Cotton

Shut-ins Must Be Registered in Homes by County Staff

LIEN ON PROPERTY

Money Advanced to Property
Old-Folks Becomes a Mortgage

Two phases of the Arkansas-federal old-age pension system—making sure shut-ins who are unable to register personally at the County Welfare office in the city hall are visited by welfare workers in their bedridden homes, and the provision whereby old folks who have an equity in property may obtain an old-age pension by making it a lien against the property—were outlined Friday noon to the Rotary club by Flora Cotton, county health nurse and chairman of the Hempstead County Welfare Commission.

The speaker was the only club guest, introduced on a program arranged by A. H. Washburn. Meanwhile, Robert M. Wilson, postmaster, was introduced as a new Rotary member.

Pensions Outlined

Miss Cotton's speech on old-age pensions followed.

A sound old-age pension system will represent the state's social conscience in action. For Arkansas this is a new thing in government, however, it is being universally accepted that the government, federal, state and local, has an obligation to see that no one suffers for the lack of necessities of life. It outrages our sense of decency to see so many people approaching old age with feelings of horror and fear.

It is known to be, socially wasteful for children to be deprived of education and proper food in order that their grand parents may not starve. For that reason most civilized nations have adopted public assistance programs for the aged, many of them are ahead of the United States in this respect.

Some outstanding characters of sound old pension plans are:

1. It is designed to meet the economic needs of all citizens who, by reason of age, are incapable of earning their own living and who have no other means of support. It attempts to extend the normal, happy existence, rather than forcing residence in an almshouse merely because one has graduated from the school of active productivity.

2. Benefits are such that they interrupt normal living as little as possible, unless the mode of living is socially dangerous, in which case new arrangements are made by the worker; who co-operates with the recipient. Old age pensions differ from other direct relief chiefly in that they are granted in the form of monthly cash vouchers rather than monthly grocery orders.

It is just as important to verify the extent of need in one case as in the other. The need requirement is the chief difference between old age pensions and Confederate pensions.

In administering an old age pension scheme, workers have a solemn obligation, not only to see that funds are conserved, but to see that there is no suffering among those who are eligible and that recipients are as comfortable as they can be made within the limits of available resources.

Our work in this organization is a privilege. A service to the state and its most needy citizens. Yet we are not benevolent philanthropists, furnishing aid for which we should expect gratitude from the recipients. We are merely agents of all the citizens, carrying out a program which their representatives have formulated.

And there is a two-fold permanent assignment for every field worker in respect to community relationship. One is to discover the needs and attitudes in our territory and find out what people are thinking, especially about old age pensions and other social security measures, then to educate and instruct the communities by interpreting the old age pension system and the department of Public Welfare so that citizens can have an understanding interest. Without their understanding.

Bankhead Law Held Invalid in Texas

Federal Judge Rules Against It, Granting Injunction

SHERMAN, Texas.—(AP)—Federal Judge Randolph Bryant Friday ruled that the Bankhead cotton control act is unconstitutional.

He signed an order granting an injunction against its enforcement. The judge said he thought it was only a thinly-disguised attempt to regulate the production of cotton under a pretext of exercise of the taxing power of the national government.

Duce May Fly to African Front

As a spectacular finale to months of feverish military activity, Premier Benito Mussolini may touch off Italy's pent-up war enthusiasm by flying in the three-motored plane in which he grimly sits, above, to the Abyssinian front to inspire his Black Shirt hosts. The map shows a direct route that the dictator might follow in his venture, probably in September, at the end of the rainy season that has made marshes of the low-lying sections of Abyssinia and prevented any military movements.

Dividend Fund Is Used for Lobbying

Senator Long to Enjoin
U. S. From Interfering
in Louisiana

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Senate lobby investigators charged Friday that the Associated Gas & Electric Co. had paid no dividends to common stockholders for years, yet had "taken a good part of a year's dividend" to spend $700,000 in an effort to defeat the holding company dissolution bill.

Long to Enjoin U. S.—Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana served notice on the administration Friday that a suit would be filed in the supreme court testing the right of the federal government to enter the states with educational and other bureaus for the expenditure of PWA money without the consent of the money.

Gold Ban Passes House

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Legislation to block gold clause suits arising from Roosevelt monetary policies was approved by the house Thursday, 258 to 88.

Republican cries of "repudiation" and "impairment" of federal credit marked its progress to the senate. There, similar charges of two leading Democrats who once headed the Treasury—Glass of Virginia, and McAdoo of California—foretold stubborn opposition. Glass and McAdoo have clashed with Secretary Morgenthau and Attorney General Cummings, the president's spokesmen, on the bill.

Withdrawals Consent

The measure withdraws consent of the government to be sued on any securities, coins or currencies. It is designed to block efforts of gold-clause bond holders to collect in devalued dollars the equivalent of the gold dollar they invested. More than $10,000,000,000 in gold-clause securities are outstanding. It requires $1.69 in dollars of the present gold content to equal the same gold weight as the old dollar.

The measure also reaffirms the pol-

Selected 6 to 2 by Aldermen to Replace Sandefur

Ex-Council Committeeman Long Associated With Late Manager

TWO FAVOR HENRY

Hamilton Hanagan Withdraws Name as Asst-
ant's Post

The Hope city council Thursday night selected Aron Moore, well known local man, as superintendent of the municipally-owned water and light plant. He succeeds the late George Sandefur who died suddenly about a month ago.

Meeting in special session, the council by a vote of 6 to 2, named Mr. Moore over J. F. Henry as plant superintendent.

Voting in favor of Mr. Moore were:

Aldermen P. B. Carrigan, C. E. Taylor, Roy Johnson, F. D. Henry, Kenneth Hamilton and L. A. Keith.

In favor of Mr. Henry were: Aldermen L. Carter Johnson and Roy Anderson.

Hamilton Hanagan, discussed as an assistant to the plant manager at a previous meeting, withdrew his name as an applicant. No assistant to Mr. Moore was discussed Thursday night. It was understood that the new superintendent would take over his duties August 1, and that the position would be permanent.

Monthly salary for Mr. Moore was not discussed Thursday night. His salary will be determined at the next meeting of the council, scheduled for the latter part of July.

Selection of Mr. Moore came quickly Thursday, the council remaining in session about 20 minutes.

Compass Distorted by Machine-Gun

Guard Fliers, Heading for Osceola, Ark., Wind Up
in Missouri

LITTLE ROCK.—A machine gun messed up what should have been a highly successful mission for Flight B of the 154th Observation Squadron, Arkansas National Guard Thursday.

The flight, led by Capt. Robert H. Baker, who was flying by dead reckoning, took off from the National Guard field at the municipal airport here, where the squadron is holding its annual field encampment, for Osceola, Mississippi county.

If gasoline had held out and Captain Baker had not come from under the hood which prevented his seeing anything but his instruments, the flight might have found itself at the north pole last night. But Captain Baker did come from under the hood for a peep at the countryside and found himself over Caruthersville, Mo., 60 miles off his course.

Too late, the captain discovered that a machine gun installed in the ship Wednesday had affected the compass by which he was flying his course. It had pulled the compass 30 degrees north, as he learned by flying a north-south section line to correct the error. The compass corrected, the captain wheeled his flight about and flew back to the National Guard field here with out getting as much as a fraction of an inch off course.

With Captain Baker were Lieut. John D. Howe and Lieut. George Adams, neither of whom was flying "blind." Their job was to keep their ships in formation with their flight leader's ship. On one occasion during the flight Captain Baker came out from under his hood and Lieut. Howe signaled with his hands that their course should be changed. The lieutenant had flown to Osceola on several occasions and none of the landscape beneath was familiar. Captain Baker was leading the flight by dead reckoning.

Certain that his course was correct, the captain went back under the hood and did not emerge again until the flight was over Caruthersville.

2 Local Girls Hurt
in Motor Accident

Misses Vera and Geraldine Van Sickle, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Van Sickle, sustained cuts and bruises Thursday night when a party of six young people turned over on the highway leading to the Pines swimming pool. The car, owned by an out-of-town visitor, was demolished but one of the occupants was seriously injured.

An increasing number of so-called rust houses have been making inroads on the business of the large hotels in Bermuda, say American trade observers in that colony.

YOUR HEALTH

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Watch Your Pets, for Your Children's Sake!

When you have a pet in the house, safeguard your children in mind, and you will enjoy, rather than regret, the presence of a dumb animal. For no matter how carefully you watch your pets, nor how clean you keep them, they are always subject to certain diseases that can be transmitted to you or your children.

Particularly at this time of year there is danger from rabies. Since dogs are closest to human beings as pets, most rabies is caused by them. But the cat, and even the cow, may cause the same infection.

When your dog develops a sudden and complete change in disposition, and begins snarling and biting, beware of danger. Look the dog up immediately and keep close watch over him to determine whether he has hydrophobia.

If a person has been bitten, not a moment should be lost in giving him the Pasteur treatment. This is almost always a certain preventive.

A bite on the face or other exposed part of the body is more dangerous than a bite anywhere else, and so immediate action is imperative. Dogs also are dangerous flea spreaders, and animals generally are subject to infestation by lice and ticks. These insects can cause much irritation and infection, and can transmit dangerous diseases.

Tapeworm, too, can be transmitted from dog to human being through the innocent process of expressing affection for a person by licking the face or hands, or by getting scraps of food in the family dishes. Once a person is infected, the cure is difficult.

Cats have about the same types of diseases that affect dogs, and occasionally some of the common infections.

To avoid serious trouble from pets, here are seven rules for you to follow:

1. Keep your pets scrupulously clean.
2. Pets should have their own dishes and should never use any of the family dishes.
3. Immunize pets, especially dogs, against rabies annually and keep dogs muzzled when they play with children.
4. Do not let animals, nor birds, "kiss" children or lick their hands. There is no healing in a dog's tongue.
5. Pets should be kept in their own quarters. After they are handled, the hands should be washed thoroughly, especially before meals.
6. Never let pets sleep with children.
7. When a pet is ill, it should be isolated. If rabies is suspected, a veterinarian should be called. If it is necessary to destroy the animal, the head should be sent to the nearest laboratory to determine whether rabies was present.

What Makes a Jury Do What It Does

It is hard to contemplate a criminal trial without reflecting on the extent to which the defendant must be at the mercy of the mental and emotional quirks of the individual jurors. Their verdict may be less a result of the evidence they have heard than of the psychological reactions which certain witnesses, lawyers, or the prisoner himself have touched off in their heads.

Gerald Bullet provides an excellent fictional study of this sort of thing in his novel, "The Jury." This book, which drags at the beginning, but moves rapidly as it approaches its climax, tells how an innocent man was nearly convicted of murder because the jurors pondered on their own feelings rather than on the evidence submitted in court.

The prisoner in this book is a young Englishman accused of poisoning his wife. The case against him is plausible, but not convincing; yet the jury comes within an ace of hanging him because its members feel instead of think.

To make his story convincing, Mr. Bullet tells the life story of each juror, showing how each man or woman is conditioned by past experience in

THE NEW DEAL IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—Not all the weather citizens of this country will slam the door when the Democrats pass the hat for the next campaign fund.

You were reminded that Mr. Roosevelt hadn't scared all the "angels" out of the party when Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., of Philadelphia was named minister to Norway. Mr. Biddle is sometimes called "the Biddle of the Biddles" and is reported to have tossed in more than $100,000 for state or national campaign chests at one time or another.

Other millionaires among a fairly large group expected by Democratic politicians to contribute next year are Gerard Swope, Vincent Astor, Ambassador Jesse Straus at Paris, and Averell Harriman, who has been working at NRA.

New Dealers recognize the need of such men in the party fold, whether they are attracted because they like to be close to those in power or whether, as it is described, they are "more enlightened" than most others in their class.

Swope has sons occupying important jobs with the Resettlement Administration and the SEC. Straus has a son with Resettlement. If you looked around enough, you'd find quite a few sons of millionaires posted here and here in New Deal ranks.

None of Roosevelt's millionaire friends has walked out on him since he called for a "soak-the-rich" tax program. Some of them deplore a few of his tendencies, but cling to his leadership.

Republicans, meanwhile, continue to mean that they aren't getting any money. Their old friends seem to be giving it all to the American Liberty League.

Still Alive, But Watchful
Senor Luis Munoz Marin, Puerto Rican senator and publisher, has learned from the local police that the San Juan police chief warned them of a possible attempt by political enemies to assassinate him. The local force now checks up with him once a week to see whether he is still alive.

Marin, here to work with the administration on its plans for Puerto Rican rehabilitation, isn't worried, but is sure he will be safer when he gets back home.

Nobody ever commits a political murder there, because possibilities of escape from the island are so remote. More Government Grief.
The administration continues to have trouble with its island governors. Bob Gore had to resign the Puerto Rican governorship after a series of jams. Paul Pearson, whose troubles are largely due to his status as a Hoover holdover, will resign from the Virgin Islands. Lately, rumbles of criticism are heard as to that amiable gentleman, Blanton Winship.

The Roosevelt tendency to "make little ones out of big ones," as evidenced by his holding company bill and graduated corporation tax proposal, is manifesting itself in Puerto Rico. The rehabilitation plan calls for enforcement of an old congressional law limiting land ownership by sugar corporations to 500 acres.

Corporations have ignored the law and now own most of the island's good soil. An enforcement law by the Puerto Rican legislature is desired by the administration.

He Doesn't Click
Winship has shown little vigor or aptness in getting this point across to the legislature, which is dominated by politicians anxious to protect the corporations and to get their hands on work-relief funds available for the island.

He called a special session of the legislature without raising the point, with the result that Secretary Ickes issued a statement which was in effect:

your coiffure is a fairly simple matter. You can sleek it back, arranging a tight, flat chignon for daytime. Loosen it a trifle and place the bun higher on the back of your head for afternoon and, when you're ready to go out to a formal evening affair, do it over in any of the popular, rather elaborate fashions.

With Greasy Gowns
A Grecian gown and flat-heeled sandals call for a high-in-the-back coiffure with a smooth top that shows your forehead and, providing you have your ears as well. One hairdresser divides long hair into three sections across the back and fixes each one into a soft roll. The center roll is pinned vertically from crown of head to nape of the neck. The side rolls are fastened at right angles with the middle one. They extend outward to the top of the ears and end in a point at the nape of the neck. The top of the hair at the front is softly waved and there is one small ringlet curl in front of each ear.

Incidentally, if you like ringlets here and there for evening, but never for daytime get a few small, flat clips that are designed especially for home-made curls, and use them while you're taking your bath and putting on evening makeup. After you have twisted a few strands around your finger, press the ringlet flat so skin or scalp shows in the center of the circle. Put the clip across the doughnut-shaped curl and leave it on until the hair is dry.

Curling Ends of Bob
To curl the ends of bobbed hair, use cylinder-like curlers and always roll upward away from the head. These ringlets can be brushed out and combed around the forehead or left as they are when the curlers are removed.

Don't forget that false curls or a roll of hair can be useful in rearrangement of a coiffure. You can get one of these in a shade to match your hair and use it for afternoon as well as evening.

In the daytime, agirl with a long bob might part her hair on one side and comb it backward from her face, arranging the long ends in tight curls high on the back of her head. In the afternoon, she could pin a thick curl from ear to ear, covering the ends of the roll with ringlets or waves. For evening she might remove the roll, brush out the curls and leave her hair long and soft on the back of her head. Next morning, it would be a simple matter to gather the ends into daytime ringlets.

A Picture
The zinnias softly were blowing,
A dreamlike, alive bouquet
Of crimson and gold and amber
And color of roses that clamber
The wall to yesterday.
The grass had been clipped and was growing
With seen of a life new-found,
When, flaunting his brilliance, a chatter.
There landed a jay-like a tatter
Of Heaven upon the ground.
"A Picture!" I whispered, still knowing.
No picture has yet been framed
That captures the fleeting wonder
And beauty vibrating under
The moment that moves untamed.
A portrait of living and growing.
This picture that God has drawn
The zinnias trembling, leaning.
The jay that is fluttering, preen-
ing.
And the smell of the new-clipped lawn!

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JO DARLEN, finishing her first year in college, learned her father to out of work. Jo wants a job and secure part time work in a marine supply store. There she meets a wealthy, handsome young man, LAM HAYTON who offers her the job of hostess at his inn at Great Lake. Jo accepts and this chance a quarrel with BRET PAUL, to whom she is engaged. Jo breaks
the engagement.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XI

AS the Japanese boy padded softly down the hall after delivering his message from the Imperial
Mrs. Marsh, Jo stood bewildered, clutching her negligee about her.
Five minutes! And Douglas Marsh had said she would have plenty of time for a shower and to dress for dinner. Evidently his mother was a woman of sudden decisions, or—this seemed more likely to Jo—she had decided to put Jo on the defensive by making her late to the very first dinner at Crest Lake.

"Well, late or not," Jo told herself, "I'm going to have my shower."

And when she felt clean and refreshed and had rubbed her hard young body's whiteness to a pink glow she found that three minutes of the five were already consumed.
Frustrated at the thought of having to rush so inensibly, Jo went to the telephone and got Penton at the desk downstairs.

"Would you please tell Mrs.
Marsh that I'm sorry, but it will be 16 or 15 minutes before I can be down?"

"I certainly will, Miss Darlen."
Something in Penton's voice told Jo that he knew what was up, and that he was definitely with her against Mrs. Marsh's little plot.

But Jo did get downstairs in less than 10 minutes, radiant and somehow not caring in the least what Mrs. Marsh thought. Penton greeted her with an approving smile.

"Mrs. Marsh and her son are in the dining room, Miss Darlen."
She nodded pleasantly. "Thank
you. . . ."

EXCEPT for the Marshes and a hovering waiter, the big dining room was deserted; and the Marshes had taken a table in one corner by one of the windows which overlooked the lake. As Jo crossed the room she was painfully conscious that the old lady was watching her every step of the way.
But Jo in her turn, hiding her analytical gaze behind a meaningless smile, examined Mrs. Marsh, too.
She saw a thin, elderly woman in a black dress which was relieved only by a bit of white collar. Her mouth was thin, like her body, and it was tightly set as if it could open only with effort. The white hair was piled carefully and re-gally, and her pale blue eyes were suspicious and cold. Indeed, she was so unlike her son that Jo was for a moment taken aback. She thought suddenly that Douglas Marsh must be almost wholly like his father; and she thought, too, that old Aaron Marsh must have led a very hard life with such a woman. No wonder he bent all his efforts toward the gathering of money; and no wonder, as Douglas had hinted, he sometimes strayed

a bit from the path of fidelity.

But Jo was relieved to note that even when his mother was present there was no change in Marsh's attitude toward her. He arose quickly and went forward to meet her.

"I'm sorry you were rushed. It was my fault entirely. I didn't know Mother had planned dinner
so early."

Jo smiled. "I must apologize for being late."

"Mother," Marsh said, leading Jo
to the table, "I want to present Jo Darlen."

"How do you do, Miss Darlen," remarked Mrs. Marsh with the air of not caring in the least how Jo Darlen did. "We've already begun, as you see. I like to have dinner when I feel like having dinner."

"Nonsense?" repeated Mrs.
Marsh, raising her eyebrows. "I'm afraid I don't know what you mean."

Marsh winked surreptitiously at Jo, and plunged into the conversation. "Would you like to start with a seafood cocktail, Jo?" At his mention of her first name Jo happened to meet Mrs. Marsh's glance with her own. The resulting sensation was not pleasant.

"Tell me, Miss Darlen," went on the old lady when her son had ordered for Jo. "Tell me something about yourself. Douglas has tried.
Perhaps he believed he was telling me something definite. But Douglas is always incoherent about good-looking young women—and, as a matter of fact, I don't believe he knows much about you himself."

FOR an awful moment Jo felt like springing from the table, telling Mrs. Marsh very definitely that what she was and who she was couldn't be, as yet, any of the old lady's business. But her common sense intervened in time to warn her that she had everything to gain by being agreeable, nothing to lose with a show of temper.

"Well," said Jo, trying hard to keep the edge from her voice, "I was born and raised in Weston
where my father ran a hardware and implement store. He sold it recently and didn't make much of a profit. I'm afraid. It was necessary for me to find work—oh, I could have gone home after the university closed—but—"

"Then you are a university girl?" inquired Mrs. Marsh.

"You can hardly say that, really I've been there only one year, and I doubt if I can return."

"Indeed? You have other plans,
I suppose?" asked Mrs. Marsh, with a glance at her son.

"I've no plans at all beyond the summer, Mrs. Marsh. For the summer I hope to be here—providing,
of course, that I can do my job in satisfactory fashion."

Douglas laughed. "We haven't much fear about that, have we,
Mother?"

"I always reserve my opinions
about people until I've known them some time. You don't mind that, I hope, Miss Darlen?"

"Not in the least," said Jo sweetly. "I'm inclined to do the same thing myself."

At this point, perhaps fearful of where the conversation between Jo and his mother might lead, Marsh launched into a rather extended narrative which was entertaining but pointless. Jo could not help smiling to herself when she saw how neatly he had drawn the old lady away from her quarry, for in a few moments Mrs. Marsh was wholly absorbed in her son's reminiscences, allowing Jo to listen and eat her dinner in peace.

Obviously Mrs. Marsh was ex-orbitantly concerned with her only son's past and future. Realizing this, Jo forgave her much of her animosity. She would be as suspicious of any strange young woman in whom Douglas had shown so much interest. After all, Douglas Marsh was all the old lady had
now. Compared with him, her money meant nothing, and the memory of his father might be only a bitter memory. While Douglas ran on pleasantly, Jo watched Mrs. Marsh—and pitied her. But her pity did not blind her to the fact that the old lady could make it very unpleasant for her at Crest Lake, and that probably she would miss no opportunity to do so.

THEY had received their coffee in fragile demi-tasses when Douglas at last finished his yarn—it had been an amusing incident of summer when he had his yacht anchored off Tahiti. And no sooner had he finished than Mrs. Marsh began.

"Douglas, you hadn't told me I could invite anyone to Crest Lake, but—"

"Why, that's certainly understood, Mother," he objected.

"Understood or not, I invited the Montgomerys. They should be here tomorrow."

"Oh, yes. . . . Remember, Jo, we saw Babs Mon-
gomery at the Olympic Bowl?"

Jo's mouth opened slightly. "Oh
yes, those Montgomerys?"

She hadn't meant to say it, and at the words Mrs. Marsh looked at her oddly. In a surprised tone she asked Jo if she knew the family.

"I only know the daughter," Jo explained. "She was a sorority
sister of mine at school."

"Oh," said the old lady, as if that explained a great deal. "She's an attractive and charming girl—
and her family are of the best."

She turned to her son. "I thought it would be good for you to have the girl here, Douglas. Someone of your own age and of your own—"

"Yes, I'm sure it will," Marsh interrupted hastily. He offered Jo a cigar. "Would you like to smoke on the veranda?"

"Please go ahead," said Mrs.
Marsh. "I can't stand to be near cigar smoke even in the open air.
I'm going up to my room, anyway."

Outside, in the shadows of the veranda, Marsh said, "You handled her beautifully Jo. You know, you become more remarkable to me
with every minute."

"You'd better reserve your opinions about me, like your mother," Jo advised.

Old-Age Pension

standing and support success is impossible.

He has been instructed to receive all applications of needy persons who have arrived at 65 years of age and pass upon them in the same manner as we do those 70 years of age or over, but we do instruct the applicant that if only a small amount of funds is received in the beginning it will be necessary to raise the age limit to 70 years.

Indian Payments Direct

We are also requested to question
the applicant for assistance or old age pension whether or not they are of Indian blood as an amendment to the Social Security bill now in conference between the senate and house provides that indigent persons of Indian blood 65 years of age will be eligible for a direct federal pension of $30 per month. It further provides that unemployable Indians under 65 years of age will be eligible for a direct federal pension of $30 per month.
It further provides that unemployable Indians under 65 who are in needy circumstances will receive $10 per month. No matching by the state will be necessary and the pension or compensation will be paid direct from the office of the secretary of the Interior.

Another thing which we have had rather heated discussion over is where the applicant owns property which most all the time is mortgaged two or three times, however, we have to have a complete location and description of their property and they must taken an oath that they are willing, or will be willing if the property is ever redeemed to reimburse the state with their property to the amount the state has paid them a pension, and if it is indicated that the children of the applicant might be interested in the property, relinquishing the property rights and making application the children are to be notified, either personally or by letter of the fact that the parent is making application for old age pension and making them aware of the fact that the applicant, if granted, creates a lien on the property of the applicant upon the applicant's death.

Help for Shut-ins

In making application for assistance or old age pension it is compulsory so far as physically possible for the applicant to appear in person to the office of the County Welfare Board to make application. When it is not possible, a member of the board or its official staff may take the application in the home. For instance if there is a single person who is an applicant and is bed-ridden and can't come to the office the law makes it mandatory that the applicant who receives a pension make individual application and take oath as to the facts set forth. And there is no way the next of kin can make application for him unless they are legally appointed guardians of the applicant, although this question has been submitted to the Attorney General as to whether or not a person with power of attorney could make the application.

Two witnesses must sign for each applicant for old age pension and they cannot be of blood or marital relation, or have a personal interest in the matter. They must also be reputable and reliable citizens of Hempstead
county.

In a survey furnished the State Welfare Commission by the local relief
office shows:
No. of unemployable families in the
county, 283.
No. of unemployables, 516.
No. of mental cases, 4.
No. of tuberculosis patients, 12.
No. of cripples, 32.
No. of chronic illness, 88.
No. of blind, 21.
No. of deaf and dumb, 2.
No. of old age, 336.
No. of mothers with babies, 101.

An this basis of this survey it will cost the department of Public Welfare approximately $50,000 per month to maintain those found to be eligible in Arkansas. This of course will be in addition to administrative expense.

THERE'S A COUPLE MORE OF HIS BEES IN THE HOUSE! ALL WE NEED NOW, IS A CROCODILE IN THE BATH TUB AN' SOME SNAPPING TURTLES IN OUR BEDS, AN' WE CAN RUN A SPARERIB THRU OUR NOSE AN' GO BORNEO!

Y'KNOW, MRS. HOOPLE—IF TH' QUEEN BEE SHOULD ZOOM IN HERE, TH' WHOLE SWARM OF 20,000 WOULD FOLLOW—AN' THEN YOU'D HAVE A REAL HOUSE-WARMING!

HMF—WELL, I'LL PUT A BUZZ IN HIS EARS ABOUT HIS BEES!

OPAL—WE'RE GOIN' OUT TO LAKE OHOH! BUT DONTCHA TELL ANYONE NOW—'CAUSE WE WANNA REST UP 'N' E ALL BY OURSELVES

OK

BUT, DEAR—THIS ISN'T THE WAY TO LAKE OHOH

NO, SILLY—WE'RE GOIN' OUT TO JOHNNY CAKE RIDGE! THERE'RE SOME SWEET PLACES T'KNIC OUT THERE—AN' I'LL BE SURE T'BE LET ALONE

IF WE WENT T'LAKE OHOH, ALL TH' GANG WOULD BE THERE BEFORE WE WERE—'CAUSE THEY'LL BRIBE OPAL T'TELL WHERE WE WENT

BUT, IT'S QUITE FAR, OUT TO JOHNNY CAKE RIDGE—AND DON'T YOU HAVE A DATE THIS EVENING?

SURE—WITH JIM'S COUSIN, WHO'S VISITIN' 'IM! BUT, I'LL JUS' BREAK TH' DATE—I DON'T LIKE 'IM SO MUCH! HE'S TH' BIGGEST FIBBER I EVER SAW! 'ACTUALLY CAN'T DEPEND ON A THING HE SAYS

OKAY, CHIEF—I'LL ANNOUNCE OUR TAX PROGRAM RIGHT NOW—SO'S WE CAN BEGIN COLLECTIN'

TH' PEOPLE AINT GONNA LIKE THIS TAX BUSINESS, BUT IT'S JUS' GOTTA BE DONE

THEY'LL TAKE IT QUITE ALL RIGHT, AFTER ALL, TH' TAX IS LIGHT!

BAM! THIS NEW DEAL THIEVES IS A CROOKS! DIRTY DEAL! ROBBER! BONG! SOCK! BIFF!

WELL, FOOZY—I TOLD 'EM! I DONE MY PART, BUT TH' REST OF TH' JOB IS UP TO TH' MINISTER OF WAR!

OH HO! YOU THINKS YER A MATCH FER BULL DAWSON, HEY?

DAWSON'S A SLUGGER—EASY'S QUICK, WAIST DEEP IN WATER, EASY'S AT A DISADVANTAGE, UNABLE TO DUCK BULL'S WILD SWINGS.

DAWSON BEATS HIM BACK, KNOCKS HIM OVER A BOAT.

YER WHUPPED, YOU SPRADLE-LEGGED JUMPING-JACK!

YER WHUPPED! YER

BUT EASY'S NOT WHIPPED, HE DIVES UNDER WATER, GRABS DAWSON, AND HURLS HIM ONTO THE PORCH.

THEN LEAPS AFTER HIM. BAM! BAM! DAWSON'S DOWN! THE TIDE HAS TURNED!

DAD, SUPPOSE YOU WERE A BOY AGAIN, AND HAD A CHANCE TO FLY TO AFRICA, IN QUEST OF A FORTUNE!

AND SUPPOSE YOU FIGURED YOUR DAD WOULDN'T LET YOU GO, EVEN THOUGH YOU'D BE SAFE!

AND SUPPOSE YOU PACED THE FLOOR AT NIGHT, TRYING TO FIGURE A WAY TO GET HIS CONSENT... AND THEN, WHEN YOU HAD A WAY ALL FIGURED OUT, YOU GOT SCARED!

IF YOU HAD A PROBLEM LIKE THAT, AND WANTED TO PICK A SWELL WAY TO ASK YOUR DAD, HOW WOULD YOU GO ABOUT IT?

I'D SIMPLY SAY: 'DAD, SUPPOSE YOU WERE A BOY AGAIN, AND HAD A CHANCE TO FLY TO AFRICA, IN QUEST OF A FORTUNE'... IT WOULD BE A GINCH... HE COULDN'T REFUSE!!

WELL, EMMA, I WANT TO CONGRATULATE YOU ON RECEIVING THAT $2000 REWARD, BUT YOU HAVEN'T BEEN AROUND TO THE BANK TO DEPOSIT IT!

NOPE! I TUCKED IT AWAY IN A SAFE PLACE!

A BANK IS THE ONLY SAFE PLACE FOR THAT AMOUNT OF MONEY—OUR BURGLAR ALARMS ARE CHECKED DAILY

I'M NOT WORRYIN' ABOUT ANYBODY ON THE OUTSIDE BREAKIN' IN!

BUT EVERY EMPLOYEE OF OUR BANK IS UNDER BOND AND AS PRESIDENT I SEE THAT EVERYTHING IS CHECKED AND DOUBLE-CHECKED!

YEAH! BUT WHO CHECKS UP ON YOU, LEW?

Dionne Quintuplets Give Their Legs a 'Try'

Cecile may not be able to take that first step just yet, but she isn't afraid. She realizes that her sturdy little legs hold her up nicely, and that it will be no time at all before they walk off with her.

Marie is just a little dubious. Tiniest of the quintuplets, she seems hesitant about standing alone. And notice how that left hand is held out all ready to break the fall, just in case she SHOULD fall!

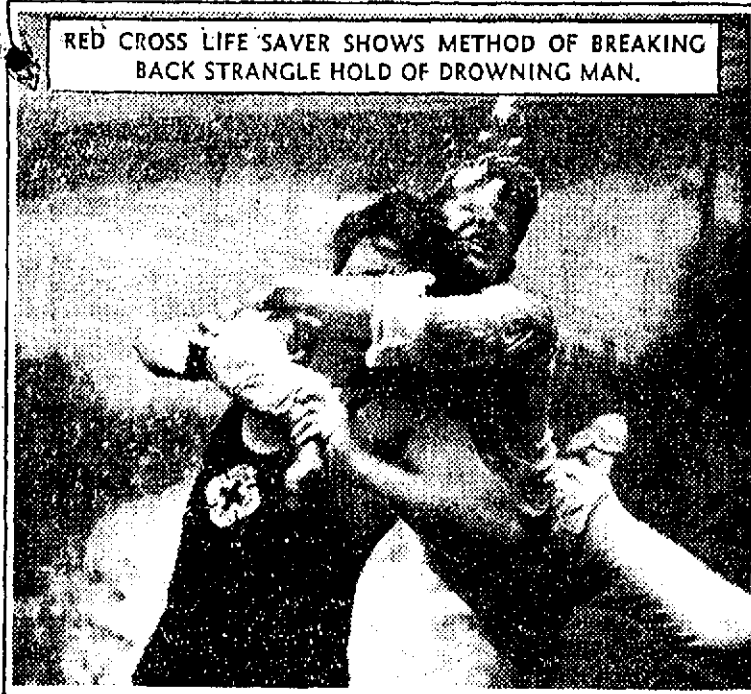

Emelie is all "heads up and marin' to go." See what a thrill is reflected in the little face as she realizes "I'm standing up!" The nurse's hands are steadying her, but not holding her up.

Annette has chosen a sort of ballet-dancing pose for her debut as a pedestrian. Note how the sturdy little legs hold her up with only guiding finger-tips to steady and guide her a bit.

Camera Bares Two Souls' Agony

All the remorse and self-loathing of a murderer, and all the horror and pity of his sister on hearing the details of his terrible act were recorded by the camera in this grim photo. Daniel W. Neilds, left, who has confessed that he killed his sweetheart, seems trying to bury his shame in his rough workman's hand, while the face of his sister, Mrs. W. S. Wilson, is deep-etched with terror and horror as she listens to the testimony of the murderer's brother Harry. The photo was made at the inquest into the death of Francis E. Conklin, SERA secretary, who was found shot to death in a Los Angeles park.

Just Four Years Short of Century

Healthier than at any time in recent years, John D. Rockefeller, Sr., passed his 96th birthday hopeful of realizing his ambition to turn the century mark of life. He's shown here in his newest portrait, taken just the other day at Golf House, Lakewood, N. J., where he is spending the summer.

NEPTUNE'S NIFTIEST DAUGHTER

Katherine Rawls, generally acclaimed the best all-around mermaid in the United States, visits Manhattan Beach, N. Y., July 18-21, for the National Amateur Athletic Union women's outdoor swimming and diving championships. Miss Rawls will defend her crown in the 3-meter springboard dive and compete in several swimming events. Miss Rawls, 17-year-old miss of Miami Beach, is shown posed for a spring and in breast stroke action.

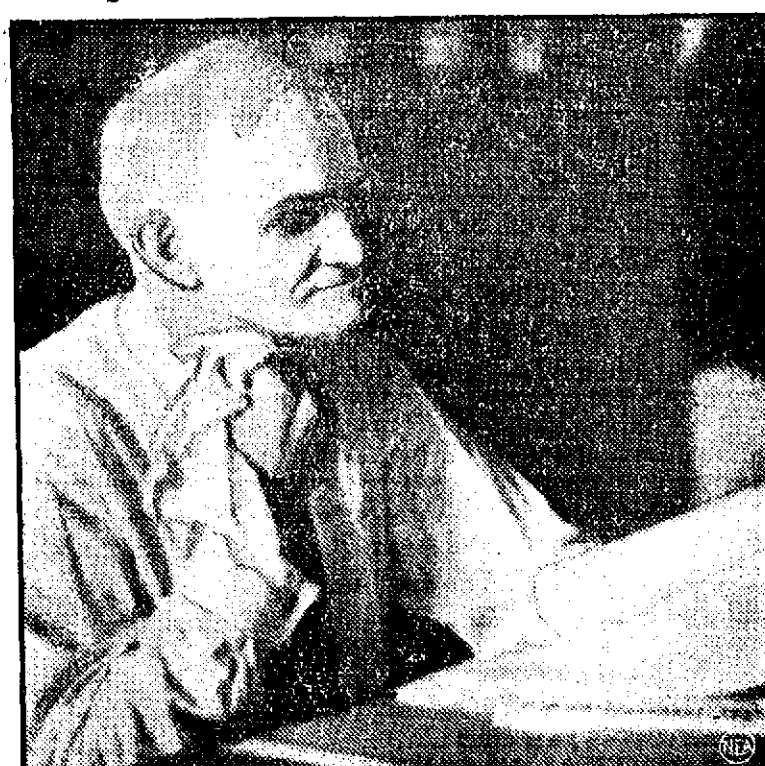

'Tops' From Toes to Tresses

From her fiery, flowing shock of golden hair to her tantalizing toes, beautiful Maria Gambarelli, world renowned ballerina, above, is acclaimed the "tops." In fact, as a toe dancer, she is said to be equal in dramatic appeal to the great Pavlova. Fans will be able to judge that claim when they see her soon in movies.

Speaker's Too Hot to Speak

They have hot days down in Tennessee, but Speaker Joseph W. Byrns seems ready to admit that they're just as sizzling in Washington, as he mops at his perspiring face while looking over some of the president's "must" legislative measures. But Byrns keeps working at top speed in presiding over the House, hoping to get back home before the scorching days of mid-August.
